Review Phrase

May 21, 2010

What is wrong with the following paragraph:

Why do computer scientists need to know algebra? Clearly, algebra and computer science have deep connections. This theory that algebraic methods can be implicated as software programs has been around a long time. The data shows that it is an effecient way to prove theorems will take a long time. Therefore, software design is a type of algebra. Studies have been done to see if algebraic programming can solve polynomial time problems, but they have not been effective.